Vietnamese painter praised in Japan

Vietnamese artist Nguyen Dinh Dang has received the “Outstanding Emerging Painter” prize awarded by Japan’s Sampo Fine Arts Fund.

“Loi Ra” – oil painting by Nguyen Dinh Dang

The award, launched by the Sampo Insurance Group, is offered annually to outstanding members of more than 30 Japanese leading fine-arts associations and around 30 painters promoted by Japanese fine-arts critics.

Dang is the only foreign member of the Japan’s Subjectivity Fine Arts Association.

The Subjectivity Fine Arts Association nominated Dang as its most outstanding artist member ahead of the association’s 43rd exhibition opening at the Tokyo Fine Arts Museum September 1.

Of the hundreds of works on display, Dang’s oil painting Loi Ra (Exit), which features the life of young Japanese women before and after marriage, has been very well received.

Residing and working in Japan since 1994, Dang is a nuclear physics researcher at Japan’s Institute of Physics and Chemical Research (KIREN) in Saitama, near Tokyo.

He is also the member of the Vietnam Fine Arts Association and the Hanoi Fine Arts Association.
